

RADONIE MANOR

fundavit - 1842 2010 - restoravit

The Manor House in Radonie represents the very essence of Polish culture and tradition at its best. Elegant, original and intimate are the words that best describe a place you will not find in any guidebook.

This is a venue that you cannot simply hire, but a place to which you have to be invited.

The choice for those seeking a distinctive and authentic venue offering culinary and cultural experiences of the highest quality. Thanks to co-operation with outstanding Polish chefs, artists and musicians, arranging meetings for even the most demanding groups will not be a challenge.

One of only a handful of beautifully restored Polish manor houses

The earliest mention of the Manor House in Radonie dates back to the end of the XVIII century. In the mid XIX century, Piotr Folkierski, of the House of Radwan, built a brick, classical style manor house, based on a traditional rectangular shape, on the outskirts of Warsaw. In the same period, a beautiful, scenic park was created on the grounds of the manor house.

After World War II the Radonie Manor shared the fate of many Polish manor houses, it was taken over by the State and fell into disrepair and ruin. In 2010, after nine years of painstaking restoration, the Manor House, was returned to its former glory. The new owners have decided that they would like to share its beauty and make it available for exceptional events.

Manor House in Radonie – The Space

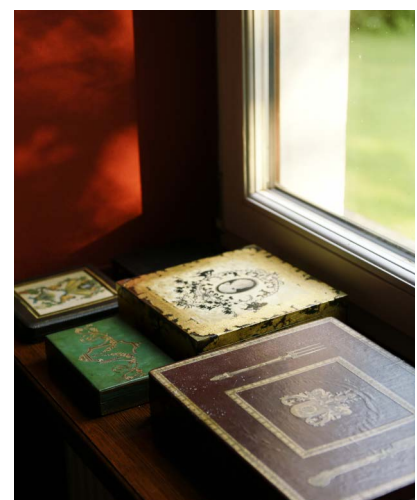

The most distinctive feature of the Manor House is its unique ambience of intimacy and elegance, discernible in every detail of this exceptional venue. The current owners have succeeded not only in recreating the substance of the building, but also the atmosphere of a by-gone manor house. They have furnished and decorated the magnificent interiors with great care and a fine eye for style.

Elegance discernible in every detail
